The Great Australian Dunny Poem

"The Great Australian Dunny"

This ole Aussie icon was one of the best; you had your own privacy when you sat down to rest. It stood crooked and unsteady, in the yard down the back Not even a footpath, just only a worn track.

The door would swing open and there was the throne
And you'd fight off the blowies who called it their home
At night in the Dunny, good heavens it was black
But you had your ole torch, to get back up that worn track.

No toilet paper, tissues or sprays galore
Just newspaper instead, spread all over the floor.
You could read all the gossip in your local town
And know whose leaving who! from playing around.

I reckon this outside "Aussie Dunny" deserves a thought on Australia Day. At least you had your privacy, not like today....
